

The burden of memory is too heavy to handle. Everything I held dear has been changed, corrupted, vanished or died with time and now only exists in my mind. I live to carry these echoes within me into the future. Call it nostalgia, but I know in my heart that it must be more than that.

